

Washington, DC – Congressman Bruce Braley (D-Iowa) was notified by the National Farmers Union today that he has been named a recipient of their Golden Triangle Award. According to the National Farmers Union, the award is given each year to members of Congress who have demonstrated outstanding leadership on issues affecting family farmers, ranchers and rural communities

“I’m incredibly honored to receive this award from the National Farmers Union,” Braley said. “Iowa’s farmers, ranchers and agriculture producers are the backbone of our state’s economy and I am proud to be their voice in Congress. I promise to continue fighting to protect Iowa’s family farms and maintain our status as one of America’s leading states for agriculture and farming.”

The National Farmer’s Union will present the awards to honorees on September 14.
